In the last 18 months, the cost per gallons of home heating oil has fallen to levels that we have not seen since the early 2000's. What's more, many experts seem to think that this is not just a blip on the radar, that "a new normal" has been established. Good riddance!

The Future is Clear for Heating Oil

Heating Oil in Connecticut is Getting Better Every Day!

Heating oil has undergone an exciting revolution that is making it more appealing than ever before. Today's heating oil is cleaner, more energy efficient as well as environmentally friendly. For years the heating oil industry has been shifting to include a higher concentrate of Bioheat while reducing the oil's sulfur content.

The benefits of Bioheat heating oil are many. It is made from soybeans or other natural resources making it renewable, biodegradable, non-toxic, clean-burning, and therefore good for our planet. It requires no modifications to your existing heating system, but also allows for newer, more efficient, equipment to be installed. Plus, it doesn't cost more for consumers. And best of all, Bioheat® is grown and created right here in the United States, so it supports local farmers and local jobs

Bioheat is a big deal, but that's not the only thing that's been happening to heating oil in Connecticut these days. For one, sulfur levels have been dramatically reduced. Now, ultra-low sulfur heating oil is the norm. This means that emissions are lower and the chance of system issues has been reduced significantly. Additionally, we have begun to realize the benefits of the high-efficiency heating systems of today. Over the past few decades, heating oil systems have improved dramatically. So much so that the average home in Connecticut that used to use 1,200 gallons of heating oil per year now needs less than 800 gallons to produce superior heat.

Always looking forward, the state of Connecticut has adopted a sulfur and Bioheat requirement which will see even more improvements for years to come.

In short, the future for heating oil looks brighter every day!
